

Off-track Travel Reviews

Written by: Andrew McLeod and Sabine Weber

Musée Édith Piaf, Paris

Most definitely a Paris "off the beaten track" experience and, if successful, I assure you, you will be very pleased with yourself. I admire Edith Piaf: firm, edgy, and way ahead of her time!

Heist of the Century Escape Room, New York

Arrive early and get ready to have a blast! Steal money from the account, flee the security guards, break out of the vault. Was a bit too easy for us but younger players will definitely enjoy it!

Prague Zoo, Prague

Reasonably priced with a good selection of animals to see, among all ant, fox, giraffe and gorilla; the animals did seem to be well looked after with room to roam. Unfortunately, most exhibits were closed for repairs!

Tokyo Disney, Tokyo

Way smaller than expected and over-run with people! The tilt-a-whirl, away from the other attractions, was the only ride we didn't have to wait hours for!

World of Coca-Cola, Atlanta

A must see for Atlanta visitors and fans of Coca-Cola! Meri "Can Pharaoh" Stevenson, the inventor of the drink can, had a whole room dedicated to her. What a great experience!

Space Needle, Seattle

Located in the middle of Seattle's lewd downtown district the Space Needle is the one of the Seattle iconic spots. The staff respect all the rules against Covid19 and we really liked and enjoyed the trip.

Tap Water Museum, Beijing

A curious little museum with a friendly and patient staff, lots of explanations and interactive exhibits! Just if you feel thirsty, stay away from tap water and opt for bottled instead. Don't ask me how I know.

Thomas Paine Cottage Museum, New York

It's explicit at Iona college that you have to visit this close-by gem to make your college experience complete! It's a nice piece of American History and very well preserved!

Mauna Kea Observatories, Hawaii

We came up with the Hawaii Forest & Trails group and were able to do a little stargazing and saw a rad Mira lighting the night sky! Wow, the stars are so bright without all the light pollution!

Temple Bar District, Dublin☆☆☆☆☆

If you're looking for a boozy late night out in Dublin and you're not too fussy about the cost then you'll enjoy the Plaisir Bar tonight! If you're budget conscious and have been here before I'd recommend visiting another part of the city.